Passes
Rent Bill

Would Keep The Controls by 36
To 28 Vote to
Last of Year

WASHINGTON, June 12—(AP)—The Senate today passed a rent control bill and sent it on to the House. The vote was 36 to 28. The measure is short of the one year's extension asked by President Truman, but provides:

1. For keeping present controls, now due to expire June 30, until the end of the year.

2. That after Dec. 30 cities and local communities which want to continue controls can keep them for six months more by referendum or action of local governing bodies.

A similar bill already has been approved by the House Banking committee and an early House vote is expected. Speaker Rayburn (D-Tex.) told reporters he is confident the House will pass the bill.

Before the final vote, the Senate rejected, 44 to 25, a Republican move to send the bill back to the Banking committee.

That took most of the fight out of the opposition.

Senator Cain (R-Wash.), who had prepared a long speech in opposition of the measure, decided against making it.

Republican Leader Wherry (Neb.) called for an immediate vote, but Senator George (D-Ga.) arose to attack the bill as "purely political."

Wherry had made the losing motion to shelve the bill.

The vote was regarded as a general test of Senate sentiment toward the question of continuing federal rent controls, now due to expire June 30.

But some of those who voted against putting the bill aside had announced they would vote against the bill on the question of final passage.

The attempt to shelve the bill was made by Senator Wherry of Nebraska, the Republican floor leader. Early last Saturday morning, at the end of a turbulent 17-hour Senate session, he moved to send the bill back to the Banking committee. Such action often means killing a measure.

By agreement, a vote on Wherry's motion was put off until today.

For administration leaders, the big question now is when they can get a vote on final passage.

Filibuster Last Week
Senator Cain (R-Wash.) conducted a 12-hour filibuster against the measure last week.

Before the vote, Cain told a reporter that the outcome of it would determine his future plans. Cain said he would use "every legitimate means" he could to beat the bill and end rent controls.

No Democrat voted for the Wherry motion to recommit. Five Republicans—Donnell (Mo.), Hendrickson (N.J.), Langer (N.D.), Millikin (Colo.) and Saltonstall (Mass.)—voted against the move along with 39 Democrats.

Senator George (D-Ga.) told the Senate he would vote against recommitment "in the interests of orderly procedure" but expected to vote against the bill itself.

"There is no nationwide shortage of housing at this time," George said. "I can't justify a vote here to meet only local conditions however distressing they may be."

Senator McClellan (D-Ark.) said he felt the same way George did.

Just before the vote, Chairman Maybank (D-S.C.) of the Banking committee said that if the bill was returned to it, the committee would send it back to the Senate immediately without change. The committee sent the bill to the floor originally by an 8-5 vote.

Green Takes Issue
With Donnell on Rail Strike Bill

WASHINGTON, June 12—(AP)—AFL President William Green said today the President has "an inherent power" to seize industries in labor disputes that imperil the national health, safety or welfare.

He made the statement in testifying before the Senate labor committee against a bill by Senator Donnell (R-Mo.) to prohibit rail strikes and require compulsory arbitration of all rail labor disputes.

Green called the bill an attempt "to establish a phase of Russian philosophy into American life." He said it was "a gratuitous insult" to assume that labor would permit any real national-wide strike emergency to develop.

Taking issue with him, Donnell said his bill simply was based on the view that the public interest is "predominant" to that of either labor or management in a dispute that threatens a national emergency.

He added that the compulsion objected to by Green was no different than the compulsion on all citizens to submit their disputes to a court rather than to try to settle them by force.

Green agreed with the senator that "the welfare of the public is more dependent on the transportation industry than possibly any other" but contended the public interest can best be protected under present machinery for the mediation of rail disputes.

Act in Emergency
If these procedures fail, he added, "the President has authority to take over the railroads and operate them in an emergency."

The AFL chief went on to say that the President has inherent seizure powers in any national emergency strike and declared "we have no objections to that."

The question of whether the President has such powers was debated in Congress last year in connection with proposed amendment of the Taft-Hartley labor act.

At present, the President has no special legal authority to take over industries, except that under a 1916 act he has power to seize the railroads in time of war for the movement of troops and essential materials.

Green said that whenever the President has taken over an industry in behalf of the government, there has been no stoppage of work.

Donnell, however, said that the railroad strike in May, 1946, was a case "in which a strike did go forward after the government took over."

Green replied that the strike was of "very short duration," adding that as he recalled it lasted only a couple of days.

The AFL chief said it is false to assume that "the working men and women of this nation have so little regard for their country and its institutions as ever to permit a situation to arise where the existence of the nation, the maintenance of its institutions, and the health and welfare of its citizens are in actual fact imperiled."

"Any legislative assumption that the working people of this country are so lacking in patriotism and moral fiber is a sad commentary not on the workers, but on the state of mind of those very legislators."

Youths Held
Over Killing
In Indiana

Arrested After Collision Near Springfield

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., June 12—(AP)—The spectacular crash of a heavily-loaded milk truck and two cars near here yesterday, which trapped three youths accused of an Indiana killing, today took the life of the truck driver.

Lynn Berry, 31, of Aurora, Mo., died in a hospital here of burns suffered when his truck caught fire after the crash. He had first, second and third degree burns over his entire body.

Three occupants of one of the cars involved in the crash are in jail here and officers say they are charged with the murder Saturday of Albert M. Thayer, 46, a prominent attorney and former prosecutor. His body was found near Noblesville, Ind.

The prisoners are identified as Carol Dooley, 25, driver of the car, which was stolen from Thayer after his murder; James Edward Chaffin, 17, and Earl Michael Kelly, 16. All are from Indianapolis.

A coroner's jury was impaneled this morning to view the truck driver's body and an inquest probably will be held today.

Collision on Highway 166
With dramatic swiftness, the case developed like this—

A few minutes after noon yesterday, the truck driven by Berry collided with a 1949 Oldsmobile driven by Dooley on a bridge on highway 166 about three miles west of here.

The impact caved in the side of the car, ripped the trailer loose from the truck. The truck's cab caught fire after it bounced against the side of the bridge and then into another car, in which Mrs. Mildred E. Murphy, 41, was taking her 78-year-old father, John K. Knuckles, for a Sunday ride.

The truck driver, Berry, crawled painfully to the creeked below the bridge to extinguish his blazing clothing.

The Oldsmobile's driver Dooley, was severely cut and bruised in the accident. The other two youths escaped with less serious injuries. All were taken to a hospital here.

A state trooper, doing some routine checking at the accident scene, noted that the Oldsmobile's registration papers were made out to Albert M. Thayer of Indianapolis.

To County Jail

A telegram was sent to Indianapolis authorities. The reply, which told of Thayer's murder, caused officers here to transfer the three Indians from the hospital to county jail.

At the jail, the two younger prisoners, Kelly and Chaffin, told this story to Sheriff Glenn Hendrix:

Dooley and the car's owner, Thayer were friends. Saturday the two men were driving around Indianapolis when they stopped and asked young Kelly and Chaffin if they would like a ride.

The boys hopped in and they headed north out of the city on a country road.

After driving about 20 miles, Thayer drove around a schoolyard then turned and stopped the auto near a game reserve, a heavily wooded area.

Dooley and Thayer had been drinking, the boys said, and they got out of the car.

Dooley became angered, the boys said, and he began beating and choking Thayer. He shoved a finger down Thayer's windpipe and then ordered the two boys to remove their shoes and beat Thayer over the head with them.

After Thayer lost consciousness, his bloody body was dragged into high weeds.

Chaffin said he and the others thought Thayer was dead when they left.

Before getting in the dead man's car they removed about $28 from his billfold and took his wrist watch.

Collector's Office
Open at Noon

The office of city collector will remain open during the noon until June 20, it was announced today by City Collector Paul Albert.

During that hour, it is anticipated many motorists who would like to purchase their city-licenses on auto and truck stickers will be benefited. The dead line is June 20, and after that date motorists will be subject to prosecution, if stickers are not displayed on windshields of automobiles or trucks.

A city ordinance provides a penalty of not less than five dollars and not more than $100 if arrested for not having stickers displayed on windshields.

There still remain approximately 3500 car owner in Sedalia who have not purchased city licenses.

Teen-Agers Ban Is Removed

TEANECK, N. J., June 12—(AP)—It's all right for teen-agers to go to the movies here — as long as they don't set fire to the place.

The owners of the only movie house here, the Skouras Theatres Corporation, have rescinded a ban on teen-agers unaccompanied by parents.

Al Harris, the 30-year-old manager who imposed the ban a week ago, quit his job in protest.

Harris had banned teen-agers (while still allowing admission to the pre-teen cowboy set) after he got tired of stopping the film and climbing on the stage to ask for quiet. His patience finally broke after three bonfires in a single week were lit inside the theater during performances.

Police arrested a 15-year-old boy who said he lit the fires just for fun.

The owners said in a newspaper advertisement that "it was only a small segment of youngsters who were the trouble-makers." They said they believed the ban had served its purpose and consequently was being lifted.

Harris, in submitting his resignation, denounced his employees' policy as "appeasement."

He said lifting the ban now is "admitting defeat."

Final Tribute
To Judge Clark

Escort of Highway
Patrol to Lawson
For Burial Services

JEFFERSON CITY, June 12—(AP)—State officials, friends and former colleagues paid tribute today to Supreme Court Judge Albert M. Clark. He died at his home here Friday night of a heart attack at the age of 71.

From the flower decked altar of the Methodist church, Rev. B. L. Schmidtke eulogized Clark as "one of Missouri's leading citizens."

Both his colleagues and the public, Schmidtke said, could testify to his cool, confident, efficient manner. Missouri has lost one of its finest and greatest citizens.

The minister told how Clark rose from the role of Ray county country boy to a place on the state's highest court. Despite his high position, he found time to counsel young lawyers just starting in the profession he practiced for 50 years.

Judge Clark's life was marked by kindness, friendliness and humility.

"He loved people," Schmidtke added, "and that is one of the greatest measuring rods of all."

Schmidtke recalled how he once noticed a Bible on the judge's desk.

"Yes, that is part of my daily study," the judge said.

The brief funeral services here were attended by Gov. Forrest Smith, who also came from Ray county, judges of the Supreme Court, state Senators with whom Clark formerly served, Democratic State Chairman John H. Hendren and the elected state officials.

Those who came from out of town to pay a last tribute included former Supreme Court Judge James M. Douglas of St. Louis, former U. S. Senator Frank P. Briggs of Macon, Dr. Frederick A. Middlebush, president of the University of Missouri, state Sens. Michael Kinney of St. Louis and Richard J. Cranier of Moberly and others.

From here the funeral procession drove to Clark's native town of Lawson where the Masonic lodge of Richmond was to be in charge of graveside services. Highway Patrol cars escorted the cortege.

Large Crowd at Swimming Pool

The biggest turn-out of swimmers since the new Liberty Park swimming pool opened May 30, gathered in the pool, all day Sunday. A crowd of between 650 and 875 swimmers enjoyed themselves.

P. A. Sillers, manager of both pools, announced that 160 adults and children were taking swimming lessons on Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings. The pool will be closed on those mornings, except for those taking swimming lessons. On Tuesday and Thursday mornings, the pool is open to all swimmers, and on Saturday mornings, anyone can swim for a dime.

The pools are closed during the noon hour and re-open at 1:00 o'clock, and continue to stay open each day until 9:00 p.m. They are closed Sunday mornings.

Sillers said now that the weather is getting hotter, more swimmers each day continue to come out for a swim.

Emery L. Ellsworth, chairman of the public building and grounds committee for the City Council, stated today he was gratified to see such a large crowd out Sunday, and to know the pools are being appreciated by the public.

Rotary Talk
On Progress of Community

John F. Zander,
CofC Secretary
Is The Speaker

John F. Zander, Secretary-Manager of the Chamber of Commerce, spoke today before the Rotary Club, Hotel Bothwell, at their noon luncheon on the subject, "Community Progress." He stated that the Rotary Club is helping to carry the load on community progress and that each of its members, by taking membership in this civic organization, have pledged themselves to unselfish service and have taken their place as leaders in community development.

Zander stated that in any progressive community, to carry through an active program of work, financial assistance as well as physical effort, is of prime importance.

Securing of Revenue

Many times in an organization such as the Sedalia Chamber of Commerce, the money received from the membership dues alone was not sufficient to carry the tremendous load of the ambitious program of work; that many times other forms of revenue must be sought, if the Chamber Organization is to go actively forward.

"A good example of this extra Chamber of Commerce activity, for the purpose of raising funds, is the big three-ring Mills Brothers circus coming to Sedalia Wednesday."

"Those who enjoy joys and thrills of the circus Wednesday will not only be seeing one of America's foremost circus shows, but if they have purchased their tickets of admission in advance of tomorrow night, they will be contributing to the welfare of Sedalia, because of the fact that 50% of all the advanced sale adult tickets remain with the Chamber of Commerce for the purpose of developing Sedalia."

Zander gave an account of the recent trip he made to Washington, D. C., to attend the 38th annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

The theme throughout the whole session was "Perform something to be remembered," which was part of the following statement made by Daniel Webster many years ago, "Let us develop the resources of our land, call forth its powers, build up its institutions, promote all its great interests and see whether we also in our day and generation may not perform something worthy to be remembered."

The trend of the whole meeting in Washington was that business of America should get off the defensive and take the offensive, that "unfortunately, misinformation, misunderstanding and lack of information has produced a distorted conception of business and our economic system in the minds of many people. Business is not telling the story often enough to enough people."

It was urged at the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States that business hold more employee meetings, that they ask employees what they think about their jobs, about their company, and about our economic system. This would undoubtedly bring much more closer relationship between management and labor in much of America's business and industry.

Local Chambers of Commerce and other civic organizations can help foster in each locality the "American Opportunity" program, with all the tools and "know how" available from the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Attention to Children
Zander stated that when we think in terms of community progress or any future program for Sedalia, "We must definitely be thinking in terms of the children of Sedalia, and we must provide proper and adequate educational facilities for those children who will make Sedalia tomorrow."

Zander went on to say that in any community development, he did not believe a community could develop on a broad and wholesome basis "through the personality of one man, or of two men, or of a dozen men and a few fine women."

He said, "It takes the wholesome cooperation of all of those who are interested in developing a healthy community."

"If ever communities needed leadership, it is today. Men, unfortunately, are oftentimes criticized because they give leadership. For the progress of Sedalia and of any ship of quality, of capacity, of community, there must be leadership."

Loses Life on Fishing Trip

VERSAILLES, Mo., June 12—(AP)—A fishing trip ended in tragedy yesterday when a car overturned on a curve of state highway 5, killing one man and injuring another.

Killed was Clifford Eugene Dailey, 35, Kansas City. His brother, John W. Dailey, also of Kansas City, was injured.

They were enroute to the Lake of the Ozarks.

Warns Again on

Chief of Police Edgar C. Neighbors issued a warning this morning to motorists who continually make left hand turns on and off Ohio avenue. He said motorists violating left hand turns will be arrested and duly prosecuted.

Lately, many complaints and several arrests have been made dealing with traffic violators, who intentionally make left hand turns on Ohio avenue. The left hand traffic law also pertains to alleys, as it was explained, anyone making a left hand turn from an alley on to Ohio avenue, causes just as big a traffic hazard as a motorist making left hand turns at the intersections.

It was said at the police station this morning that those arrested, contended they did not know any different, and thought it was all right to make left hand turns.

Objection From MacArthur to Correspondent

By Tom Lambert

TOKYO, June 11—(AP)—Frank Hawley, Tokyo correspondent for the London Times, said today he had been advised he is considered "persona non grata," an unacceptable person, by General MacArthur's headquarters.

MacArthur's headquarters notified Sir Alva Gascoigne, the ranking British diplomat here that Hawley was no longer acceptable by it.

Hawley said he was told headquarters considers his reports on Japan and the occupation "subjective and not objective."

Hawley said Maj. Gen. E. M. Almond, MacArthur's chief of staff, told him on June 8 a careful study of his dispatches by headquarters proved his opposition. So it was difficult for the headquarters therefore to understand why he should "criticize MacArthur's administration."

The Times man said Almond told him "no accredited correspondent should publish any news likely to interfere with MacArthur's objectives. Those who do so might be considered security risks."

Hawley said Almond informed him that any correspondent could be expelled as a "security risk."

Hawley said he was advised by a MacArthur aide six months ago that the general objected to some of his dispatches because of certain "inaccuracies." Hawley said he never has been able to determine what MacArthur deemed "inaccurate."

The incident apparently arose out of a Hawley dispatch which said a Japanese ban on demonstrations was unconstitutional and which said Japanese police had been asked to return to occupation authorities the pistols given them by the Americans some time ago.

Not Change Policies
(EDITORS NOTE: General MacArthur gave the following for publication tonight but specified it could not be connected with any story dealing with his chief of staff's conversation with Frank Hawley of the London Times)

TOKYO, June 11—(AP)—General MacArthur tonight told allied correspondents that his headquarters will not change its policies toward their activities.

His statement was in answer to a query by a committee of correspondents on whether security precautions would be tightened to the extent that they faced expulsion for stories considered erroneous. This concern arose from the troubles of a British correspondent who was told somewhat the same thing:

"There is no change whatsoever in mind nor has there been or will there be in policies with reference to correspondents in these matters and absolutely no consideration has been or will be given to any change in the security processes so far as correspondents are concerned; these processes have been in effect since the beginning of the occupation and apparently have been entirely satisfactory to every one concerned. No thought is entertained by this headquarters of the slightest deviation from past procedures."

Finally, just about dawn Saturday, the animals were rounded up and the show was held as scheduled. But in the meantime there were scores of complaints from property owners.

C. W. Moore, president of the club, promised to fix everything. So the Lions are doing their best.

Rayburn Confers
With President
Over The Proposed Legislation

By William F. Arbogast

WASHINGTON, June 12—(AP)—Speaker Rayburn (D-Tex.) talked over prospective tax legislation with President Truman today and said later that a rise in business taxes "could offset" some of the proposed cuts in excise levies on such things as luggage, furs and telephone bills.

Rayburn did not say Mr. Truman had urged that; he merely mentioned it in talking with reporters. However, Mr. Truman recommended revision of business taxes in his tax message to Congress earlier this year. Rayburn spoke of a boost from 38 to 40 per cent in the corporation income tax.

The House speaker and other Democratic congressional leaders spent an hour and 15 minutes discussing the legislative program with Mr. Truman at their regular Monday morning conference.

They said one thing that did not come up was the question of when Congress should adjourn.

That now looks too far off. The leaders have about abandoned earlier hope of adjournment by Aug. 1.

Attending the White House conference were Rayburn, Vice President Barkley, Senate Democratic Leader Lucas (Ill.) and House Democratic Leader McCormack (Mass.).

They gave newsmen these reports on matters other than taxes: RENT CONTROL—Lucas says he expects the Senate to pass a bill this week extending the controls. Rayburn said that if the Senate does act this week, the House will pass it next week.

After Draft Action
DRAFT—Lucas said he wants to get Senate action as early as possible in a House-passed measure continuing the draft law on a "stand-by" basis. He predicted the Senate will reject a proposal, backed by southern Senators, that drafted men be allowed to say whether they wish to serve in race-segregated units and that the wishes of those who do be respected.

On taxes, the House Ways and Means committee is now drafting a bill and has voted for scaling down the excise taxes which were raised sharply during the war.

The cuts approved by the committee would cost the government over $1,000,000,000 a year in revenue. The administration wants rises in other taxes to make up for at least a major part of that.

There has been talk that President Truman would veto any bill that cost the government a large amount of revenue.

As to that, Rayburn said he had heard a lot of "conversation" that the President would veto any tax bill which did not offset excise tax cuts, but that he had received no word from the President along that line.

He remarked that the committee has been voting some heavy cuts. He said that some of these could be offset by additional corporation taxes and reductions in the amounts proposed to be sliced from the excise taxes.

He said that an increase in the corporation income tax from 38 to 40 per cent might add $400,000,000 to $500,000,000 in revenue.

The House legislative docket is in fairly good shape but Rayburn said it would be "optimistic" to look for adjournment by Aug. 1.

Repair Damage of Rodeo Animals

NORTH KANSAS CITY, June 12—(AP)—Lions club members working today on a project growing out of a week-end rodeo the club sponsored.

They're busy replacing shrubbery and flowers and repairing lawns damaged by a stampede by the rodeo principals — 119 Brahman bulls and six steers.

The animals broke out of their corral the night before they were to perform after fighting among themselves in their pen. Then they ranged through the residential area, leaving a trail of battered lawns, trampled shrubbery and flower beds.

Finally, just about dawn Saturday, the animals were rounded up and the show was held as scheduled. But in the meantime there were scores of complaints from property owners.

C. W. Moore, president of the club, promised to fix everything. So the Lions are doing their best.

KEEPING TRACK OF THE TRACTOR—The newest Ford tractors now come off the Detroit, Mich., assembly lines equipped with the "Proof-Meter" (see inset), an instrument that takes the guess-work out of tractor operation. The multiple meter shows engine speed, tractor speed, power take-off speed, belt pulley speed and total hours worked by tractor. By careful bookkeeping a farmer can use these data to figure his costs.

CHICKS' BEST FRIEND—Rex, a seven-year-old St. Bernard at St. Scholastica Convent, Chicago, spends all his time riding herd on the institution's 300 chickens. His job is to see that none of them leave the grounds. He's been doing it ever since they were baby chicks.

Construction of Devices For Control on Erosion

The construction of erosion control structures is listed as practice No. 6 in the 1950 Pettis County Agricultural Conservation Program Handbook and rates of assistance offered for this practice varies according to the type of structure made. For a concrete structure the credit rate is $10.00 per cubic yard of concrete; for rubble masonry—$6.00 per cubic yard; and for metal tubing the credit rate is 7c per linear feet for each inch of diameter of tubes.

It is often times necessary to construct some sort of mechanical structure at the lower end of a terrace outlet in order to drop the water a considerable distance to a stabilized drain. In this type of case an erosion control structure prevents erosion in the outlet and prevents the vegetative cover from being eroded or gullied due to the excessive velocity of the accumulated water from a considerable area which is diverted over the terrace outlet. There are two general types of structure which are usually used to achieve this purpose. One is known as the Missouri soil saving dam which is a thin section, reinforced concrete dam which is laid on a slope of approximately 1/2 to 1. The other type is the morning glory type of concrete structure which is attached a tube through which the water is diverted to the desired level.

Soil Saving Dams
The thin section structure or the Missouri soil saving dam is usually used on over-falls of less than 10 feet and under this type of condition, it is more economically constructed than most other types of supporting structures. Some of the advantages of the Missouri soil saving dams are: (1) This type of dam does not have to support any vertical structure; (2) temperature conditions in surrounding soil has little damaging effect on this type of structure; (3) wooden form material is not needed except for the velocity check; (4) it saves time and costs in construction; and (5) it requires a small amount of maintenance.

A tube structure has been developed by the Missouri College of Agriculture which is generally used to drop the water from the end of the terrace outlet, a distance of 10 feet or more, to a stabilized drain. While these structures are still in the experimental stage so far as to best method of construction, they are being used in increasing instances and it is expected that several will be constructed in Pettis county during 1950. They are commonly used in the river hills and North Missouri glaciated areas. There are numerous cases where this type of structure has a decided advantage over any other type which has been further developed.

Striped College 4-H Activities

Members of the Striped College 4-H club, south of Sedalia, believe that their club should serve the needs of their community as well as develop the individual member. Throughout the winter and spring months they have been carrying on a heavy schedule of community service activities under the direction of their leader, Mrs. Lester Patrick.

At the present time the 34 club members are engaged in cleaning up and disposing of trash that has been dumped in the vicinity of the Goodwill Chapel. Trash has been dumped in this area for some time by city people with no regard for beauty or sanitation. In addition a committee of 4-H'ers is at work contracting the residents of the community and asking them to cooperate in the program by not allowing anyone to dump trash on their property.

Another activity carried on by the club was the community mothers day program sponsored by the club. During the program each mother present was given a bouquet of flowers. The club is also planning a community fathers day program. At their recent 4-H Rural Life Sunday Program the members conducted the entire service at which 37 people attended.

Other special programs conducted for the community by the club this spring include a community Valentine's Party, a program for the P. T. A. and a dinner prepared and served by the girls in the cooking project at which the other club members and leaders were guests.

Some of the other community service activities carried out by the Striped College Club this spring include painting mailboxes, donating food and washing towels.

Pettis County Bull to Ohio

Burke Hengerveld Mercedes Ormsby, a registered Holstein bull owned by John F. Blumh of the Brookdale Farms, Smithton, has been sold to Frank Couchman of for the school, purchasing new pictures for the school, sending flowers to sick people in the community, cleaning the yard of an elderly lady in the community and contributing to the Melita Day Nursery.

Members of the club under the direction of their leaders and their president, Pat Moriarity are thus making the National 4-H club Theme "Better Living for a Better World" a working theme through their club activities.

They're on Warpath Over the Indian; Think He's Been Scalped by Movies

By RICHARD KLEINER
NEA Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK—(NEA)—A group of Americans are on the warpath about the Indians. They think the American Indian has been scalped by Hollywood.

The National Film Committee of the Association on American Indian Affairs has been formed to see that forthcoming Hollywood westerns do right by the red men.

With the active cooperation of many Hollywood officials, they are checking scripts of motion pictures. And they are recommending that the hackneyed movie Indian—a villainous, half-naked character who is always ready to shoot flaming arrows at anything and enjoys nothing more than a juicy scalping—be permanently discarded.

They've already chalked up successes, too. Some soon-to-be-released big budget westerns will show such revolutionary things as good Indians and authentic Indian culture.

The committee is made up of leading authorities on Indians, including Pulitzer Prize novelist of the conventional portrayal of the Indian man as lazy, with the squaws doing all the work. They point out that Indians believed in division of labor. Men and women had their distinct jobs. Women tended to the children, cooking, raising food and sewing, and the men had their tasks, too, like hunting, warfare, and painting the tipis.

The "drunken Indian" is another type that is overdone. Indians drank, of course, but they were no more susceptible to alcohol than any other race. The committee also finds Hollywood sticking feathered headdresses on all Indians, when, actually, they were just found in the plains region, and then only worn by chiefs.

All these misconceptions about the Indians, the committee says, have been used by the films. Even some Indians have been taken in by the Hollywoodized version of history.

One of the committee members, visiting an Iroquois reservation in New York, heard about a six-year-old Indian who went to a movie and came home to tell his father:

"Be mad, Daddy. Act like the real Indians in the movies."

who was suffering deficiencies of Vitamins B₁, B₂, Iron and Niacin

Mrs. Robert Duval, Carmi, Illinois, wants this paper to tell all her friends: "I'm 40 years old and the mother of 12 boys and 6 girls, of whom I'm proud but have a hard time raising them. I was run-down, nervous, couldn't sleep. I have taken 4 bottles of Hadacol. Now I sleep good and I'm glad I found such a medicine. I never can say enough for HADACOL."

If you are weak, run-down, nervous, suffer from gas, bloating, indigestion because you're deficient in Vitamins B₁, B₂, Iron and Niacin—let this amazing new HADACOL medicine help you get that wonderful zippy, clear feeling. HADACOL does not give temporary relief. It treats the cause of ailments due to such deficiencies. A big improvement is often noticed within a few days. Trial size, $1.25. Large family or hospital size, $3.50. *Photo by professional model. ©1950, The LeBlanc Corporation

Of Protopapadakis And His Friend, The Agrimi

KRI KRI THE AGRIMI poses with his captor, Eftikios Protopapadakis. The agrimi is one of the world's rarest animals. It will be shipped to Winston as a gift.

By DOUGLAS LARSEN
NEA Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON — (NEA — Eftikios Protopapadakis happened to find a baby agrimi—capraeagus pictus—in the White Mountains of Crete, and “Kri Kri” is coming to Washington to stay.
If you think that sounds like a lot of Greek, you’re absolutely right. Everyone in the cast of characters is from Greece, including the agrimi, alias “Kri Kri,” who is destined to become a living symbol of Greece’s appreciation of the Marshall Plan aid it has received.

When Protopapadakis found the agrimi, he lost no time in taking it to Dr. Harilaos Hadjissarantos, zoologist of Athens University. The professor immediately said yes, the small animal really was a rare capraeagus pictus, and agreed it would make a fine gift for America.

As a symbol, it was pointed out, the Greeks have a special reverence for the antelope-type creature; according to ancient legend it was an agrimi that succored the Greek deity Zeus. And as a sacrifice, animal experts said the agrimi is one of the outstanding rarities of the whole animal kingdom, an item any zoologist in the world would be delighted to have as a steady boarder.

That’s certainly the way Dr. W. M. Mann, director of the National Zoological Park in Washington, feels about it. And “Kri Kri” will, soon be in his charge.

To pay for the shipping charges, Protopapadakis and his neighbors scraped together a little more than a million drachmae, about $66.55. That’s a lot of drachmae for those people, but they were happy to do it.

“Kri Kri” Is Enjoying a 60-day quarantine under the careful supervision of the U. S. Public Health authorities near an Athens airport. They want to make sure that this gift doesn’t bring along and germs in his rare carcass.

Like others in the goat family, the agrimi sometimes experiences an uncontrollable urge for unusual foods. During his first day in quarantine, “Kri Kri” ate two Athens newspapers, one window drape and a 25-cent pocket edition of “Student Nurse.”

Now, however, they’ve got him on hay, grass and olives and they predict he will be in great shape for the coming trip and the ceremony which will feature his arrival.

The Greek embassy is planning quite a reception for “Kri Kri” when he gets to Washington, but they’ll keep an eye on the draperies.

Saves Five in Fire

(NEA Telephoto)
One father who will always be a hero to his children is Carl Huber, 25, pictured in Elyria (Ohio) hospital. Although bleeding badly from a severed artery, he carried four of his six small children to safety from a fire that wrecked his Elyria home. Then he dashed back into the blazing house and rescued a fifth child. In the meantime his wife Joyce, 22, had saved the sixth. Huber, who cut his arm when he punched his fist through a window pane “to let the smoke out” collapsed from loss of blood.

Miss Harriet Frances Bertman, former Sedalian, became the bride of Walter Robert Servos of Chicago at an impressive ceremony Saturday night, June 3, in the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Cohen, 4300 Adams, Gary, Ind.

Rabbi Garry August of Temple Israel officiated at the rites uniting in marriage the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abe Bertman, 768 Buchanan, Gary, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton W. Servos of Chicago.

The couple repeated their wedding vows before a background of California Woodwardia greens. Four candelabra, decked with greenery and white flowers, and other bouquets of white flowers decorated the Cohen home.

An ivory satin gown with a bodice of Chantilly lace was the choice of the bride, who was given in marriage by her father. A rolled cuff edged the low rounded neckline and the fitted sleeves tapered to points over the wrists. The skirt, which flared below the hips, extended into a cathedral train, which was accented by medallions of lace.

The bride's fingertip veil of illusion cascaded from a Juliet cap encrusted with seed pearls and she carried a prayer book topped with two white orchids and stephanotis.

Miss Jean Francis Cohen, who attended her cousin as maid of honor, was attired in a nylon organdy gown of a pale pink shade. It was fashioned with cap sleeves and a Peter Pan collar. Narrow tucks encircled the bodice and bouffant skirt and she wore a modified Dutch bonnet of matching organdy. Miss Cohen carried a cluster of stephanotis surrounded by English ivy and puffs of pink maline.

Mrs. Jack Goldman of Evansville, the former Rosalie Kaplan of Gary, attended the bridesmaid in a gown identical to that worn by the maid of honor.

Alan Kadet served as best man and Philip Bertman, brother of the bride, ushered the guests.

Prior to the ceremony Harry Berke sang "I Love Thee" and "Because."

Mrs. Bertman, who wore Chantilly lace cocktail gown of ice blue shade, took her place in the receiving line after the nites Mrs. Servos chose a gown of navy blue over beige lace. Orchid corsages were presented to the mothers and grandmothers of the couple.

Fifty members of the immediate families were served dinner at the Cohen home. Appropriate bridal music was played during the dinner.

Before leaving on a wedding trip to Wisconsin, the bride donned a military blue suit styled with a gray tab-collar. She wore gray and navy accessories and a corsage of two white orchids.

The couple will reside at 1033 North Shore, Chicago.

The new Mrs. Servos was born and attended grade school in Sedalia. She was graduating from Horace Mann high school, Gary, and attended the University of Illinois. She was a member of several honoraries at the Urbana campus and affiliated with the Delta Phi Epsilon social sorority, which she served as vice president.

Mr. Servos received his degree from the University of Illinois, where he was a member of the Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity. He is a veteran of service with the United States army air corps.

Last of ABC Team Events Tonight

COLUMBUS, O., June 13—(AP)—The last team events will be rolled tonight in the 47th American Bowling Congress tournament.

Unless the unexpected happens—and it has three times in the past—Pepsi-Cola of Detroit with its great big 2952 will be the champion.

The unexpected—a winning score on the last night of the tournament—happened first in 1916 when Commodore Barry of Chicago beat out Heime Rich's of Columbus. It happened again in 1932 when Jefferson Clothiers of Dayton, O., edged Veisines of Milwaukee. Three years later Wolfe Tones of Niagara Falls beat out Tivoli Brewery of Detroit on the final night.

A team lie? It has never happened.

Tonight the last of 72 of 5109 teams will bowl on the 59th day of the pin class.

The tournament continues in daylight tomorrow in doubles and singles. There have been ties in doubles and singles.

Other leaders as the ABC entered its final hours: Singles—Evert Leins, Ancona 757 doubles—Willie Rhosh and Earl Lins, Cleveland, 1325 and all events—Frank Santore Long Island City, N. Y., 1981.

From the basement of their Maplewood, Mo., home, the Rosses run a rapidly expanding chicken hatchery. In six years, they've built up a thriving business, depending a lot on their business telephone.

Says Mr. Ross: "Never realized how our telephone helps us save and make money, though, until we kept a five-day record of our telephone calls recently. Now I can see that we depend on our phone to make sales for us, run errands, deliver messages, do a great many important jobs. It's a friend indeed!"

Congressman's Office Collects Illegal Fee

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON.—Congressman John S. Wood of Canton, Georgia, is a scholarly, dignified gentleman who looks the way you expect a Congressman to look.

However, irrefutable evidence is at hand that Mr. Wood has been acting the way a Congressman should not act—in brief, taking money from the folks in his district for getting a bill passed through Congress.

Here are the regrettable facts in the case.

On Jan. 23, 1944, Ralph Stanfield of Tate, Ga., a resident of the Congressman's district, was struck by a U.S. Army truck, and seriously injured. As a result, he was entitled to damages from the truck-owner—namely, the U.S. government; and Congressman Wood introduced a bill authorizing $10,000 compensation.

While the bill was pending, the Stanfield family got its first intimation that Congressman Wood's office expected to be paid for performing this service.

It is, of course, the job of every Congressman to introduce bills in which his constituents are interested. He is paid a regular salary by the U.S. Treasury for this, and it is against the law for him to accept outside fees. In fact, such fees, if they go into his pocket, are a penitentiary offense.

However, the Congressman's then secretary, Charles Holcomb, according to a statement by Mack Stanfield, father of the injured boy, suggested that part of the $10,000 should be paid back to Congressman Wood. But the bill hadn't passed at that time, and the point was not pressed.

Unique Law Partner

Following passage of the bill, however, Carl Tallant, the Congressman's law partner, suggested that it was "customary" to pay 10 per cent on compensation bills of this kind. Tallant was not only a partner in the firm of Wood and Tallant, but was also on the congressional payroll and worked in Wood's office in Washington. This, in itself, is an unusual arrangement, since Tallant not only draws $7,022 from the government to work for Wood, but also handles law cases from the vantage point of the Congressman's office.

Thus Tallant, both as law partner and employee, was in a position to speak for the Congressman. And when he made out a check for $1,000, Mack Stanfield, father of the crippled boy, signed it.

I have in my possession a photostat copy of that check, dated Sept. 13, 1947, on the Bank of Canton, Canton, Georgia. I also have a photostat of a check dated the same day, made out to Cokers hospital for $3,300. In other words, when young Stanfield got the $10,000 compensation from the government, he immediately paid the bills incurred by his illness, and simultaneously was persuaded to pay an unjust fee to Congressman Wood's law partner and congressional employee.

It is significant that after the check was passed, Congressman Wood apparently got worried. For the elder Stanfield says that the Congressman asked him to keep the matter quiet. Of course, if the Congressman thought anything was wrong he could have returned the check. But he didn't.

Senator Russell Is Different

Also significant is the fact that ten days ago when the Congressman heard I was interested in this pay-off, he sent a friend of the Stanfields around and asked to borrow the canceled check, promising to return it. It has not been returned, however, and probably won't be. What the Congressman did not know was that I had obtained notarized photostats of the tell-tale check before he borrowed it.

In contrast to the $1,000 paid Congressman Woods' office for helping a crippled boy, was the fact that Senator Russell got similar relief for another Georgian who was hurt by the same U.S. Army truck. But Senator Russell, like 99 per cent of the other members of Congress, performed this service—as he was supposed to do—merely as part of his routine job of being a Senator. He charged no fee.

The second man hit by the truck was Herman Philyaw, also of Tate, Georgia, who was standing alongside young Stanfield when the Army truck came round a sharp turn, out of control, and crashed into them. Stanfield's leg was smashed and Philyaw broke his wrist. Senator Russell promptly got a bill passed paying damages to Philyaw, but charged him no fee. Congressman Wood got a similar bill passed for Stanfield, for which his office collected $1,000.

Taft Has to Campaign

You have to hand it to Senator Taft. He can be refreshingly frank—when talking to colleagues behind closed doors. And the other day, in opposing a bipartisan economic policy, he certainly laid his cards on the table.

For several weeks, patient Senator Joe O'Mahoney, Wyoming Democrat, has been trying to get his joint committee on the economic report to agree on a long term plan for full employment. In order to please Taft, O'Mahoney whittled down the Truman fair deal program though it still contained a mild statement that the way to the way to achieve full employment was by moderate government stimulation of private enterprise. The plan also included some of the fair deal ideas that Taft himself has championed in the past, such as low-cost housing.

After toning down the report, Senator O'Mahoney finally handed it to Taft at a recent closed-door session. The Ohio solon read it, then with a broad grin exclaimed:

"This is a nice essay and I can agree with most of it. But doggone it! How do you expect me to campaign on a thing like that! I've got to go out and be against everything that Truman stands for."

O'Mahoney, who had tried hard to get political unanimity, obviously was irked.

"If we are going to divide along purely political lines," he said, "this committee might just as well close its doors in election years."

Oregon Smear Campaign

Politicians who are victimized by smear campaigns can take a tip from Senator Wayne Morse, the plucky Oregon Republican.

During his rough primary fight, Morse was accused of being "soft on Communism" and a pro-Fellow Traveler. The whispering campaign against him was malicious and deadly.

But two days before the election, Morse turned the tide by taking newspaper ads in which he offered to answer any and all questions during an hour on the radio before an audience. A special battery of phone operators took down the questions from the unseen audience and the Senator answered one after the other in machine-gun fashion.

Morse's opposition sent in "smear questions," which brought the issue out in the open, and gave him a chance to answer. He is certain that radio-quizz hour won his decisive renomination.

Government Shouldn't Pay Peron's Debts to U. S. Firms

By Bruce Blossat

With the cold war centering in Europe and Asia, we seldom dwell much nowadays on events affecting South America. But the recent $125,000,000 U. S. grant of credit to the Peron government in Argentina deserves to be hauled up out of the backwash of public attention.

The average citizen reading of that grant would assume that some if not all of the money would be sent to Argentina. The fact is, not a single cent will leave the United States.

It's to be used to bail out banks and big and little businesses that have been dealing with Peron on credit and now can't collect from him. In other words, the U. S. is in effect making itself a collection agency for these various concerns.

The big question is whether this is the kind of thing our government ought to do. We are indulging banks and business outfits in their mistakes. We don't normally rescue them when they commit similar errors at home. If they go out on a shaky credit limb, we let them take the fall.

Why adopt a softer attitude toward their foreign dealings? Won't it simply invite a repetition of the same practices?

There may be some excuse for the little companies involved, since they don't always have the executive know-how that leads to careful weighing of credit risks. But there's little sense in the big firms' getting into so unsound a position as they have in Argentina.

If they feel competition compels them to extend credit to such a poor bet, they still have no reason to believe that the American people must underwrite their errors. Big business is strong enough to pay its own penalties; they are the inescapable cost of doing business in the risky climate of a free economy.

Furthermore, won't the big companies merely be playing Peron's game if they start from scratch and extend new credits once these old debts are paid?

The arrogantly proud Argentine dictator won't condescend to ask the U. S. government directly for an out-and-out loan. But he can achieve the same result, without loss of face, if Argentine enterprises can buy on credit from U. S. firms and the latter can count on the American government to bail them out when they can't collect.

Probably the banks and smaller outfits have been burned severely enough to have learned their lesson. But Washington ought to make it clear to big business that it won't save anybody a second time.

That way the whole burden will be on the individual firm taking the risk. And if Argentina has a good argument for buying but can't meet the credit terms of American companies, let Peron try to obtain a loan in the same open fashion that any other foreign leader must rely upon.

When that time comes—if it ever does—the loan application can be weighed on its merits, and particularly with regard to its effect on American relations with other more friendly South American countries.

Chance to Ward Off Strike

Since Walter Reuther, head of the United Automobile Workers, already has announced that his union's next big goal is the guaranteed annual wage, here's a suggestion:

Why not initiate an impartial background study of this plan now, before the heat of next year's bargaining battles puts too high an emotional content into the argument?

We ought to have learned something from the bitter debate that surrounded the pension issue as it hit major industries on a broad scale for the first time. On the one hand, we heard from management that labor's proposals might well ruin business. On the other, we heard from the unions that management's views were utterly destructive of workers' welfare.

Inevitably the bargaining will take this kind of extreme turn again, unless perhaps both sides—and the public as well—can face the annual wage proposal forearmed with all the relevant facts.

How has the annual wage idea worked where it has been applied thus far? Does it fit small companies and large alike? Must special market conditions prevail to support it?

These are but a handful of the questions that ought to be answered well ahead of the point where emotion enters the bargaining picture in full force.

We continue our ladder: (5) After throwing out these insincerities, don't smuggle them back. Phillip Lee, a Chinese Minister, tells how his father had a passion for collecting magazines and papers. Every New Year he would clean them out of his house, and then bring them back again! You, too, will be tempted to bring back your dismissed insincerities, perhaps under different names and guises. If you allow them back, you will add to your insincerities and insincerity of allowing them back under assumed names and forms.

(6) Don't take up the cross and then cancel it. Perhaps the insincerity is connected with positive purpose to do something at any cost. The tendency will be to take up the cross for a while, soften it, and then finally cancel it. The Russian cross has two crossbars, one rather oblique. The reason is said to be this: A priest said to his flock, "You will not obey of the church." He did. But there was such an outcry that he brought back the cross, "canceled." "I bring it back to you, but I bring it back with a line drawn through it, for you have canceled the cross." This "canceled cross" was taken up and copied as the original. Look for "canceled crosses" in your life—for toned-down resolutions, for softened determinations, slowed-up purposes. H. G. Wells speaks of "a muffled Christianity"—much of our Christianity is muffled.

(7) Deliberately go out and confess to someone your insincerities. That act will teach the self that all insincerities will have to be confessed. The self will be loath to harbor insincerities, since they must be confessed in the end. (8) Be a part of a group disciplined to confess honesty and frankness. Your sense of loyalty to that group will keep you from private dishonesties and insincerities. (9) Every day with "open face" behold as in a glass the glory of the Lord and be changed into the same image from "clarity to clarity." (Luther—II Corinthians 3:18).

O God, help me this day to stand before Thee with open face and open mind and open being. For I, too, would be changed into the same image—Thee image. For day by day I want to go from clarity to clarity, a transparent soul. Amen.

Fading Hopes—

SMEAR CAMPAIGN

By Edwin Rutt

Copyright 1950 by NEA Service, Inc.

THE auburn-haired girl raced across the tennis court on legs like long tanned scissor-blades. She just managed to get her racket on Miss Graydon's scorching return. Then from deep in the corner she brought off an almost impossible shot. The ball cleared the net with a scant inch to spare, a little white rocket exploding at Miss Graydon's feet. Miss Graydon's shoulders moved helplessly and she shook her head.

She'd had never a chance with that one.

The point gave the auburn-haired girl another game. Miss Graydon, cooing indignantly on her own service, began bating balls to her opponent.

Bill Jarvis, on the fringes of the spectators, clapped decorously. It didn't occur to him, at the moment, that he was practically a one-man cheering section. He did not notice the asides and glances that passed between the young women who watched the match.

A flunky from the Inn—Look-out Crest Inn where, Bill had been scandalized to learn, rates started at $25 a day—had propelled an old lady's wheeled chair to a point from which she could comfortably view the finals of the intra-mural tennis tournament.

The old woman's gray hair, a determined but outcasted spinster-type, took an unholy shelling.

Now, however, she spoke. "Well, young man," her voice was unexpectedly strong, "I'm glad somebody's got the decency to give that girl a hand."

The old woman's eyes were like steel bullets. Their awareness, aliveness, contrasted strangely with cheeks withered like prunes and old lips rather ridiculously rouged.

"Oh," he said, somewhat startled, "I thought she rated it. Darn good shot."

"She made good shots all along. And received only a smattering of applause, as the fella says. But"—disapproval thinned that surprisingly able tone—"let the Graydon female win a point and they fall all over themselves. This is a partisan crowd, young man."

"I take it," said Bill, "that this wasn't a popular win."

The oldster snorted, "I should say not."

"Why's that, now? I'd have figured . . ."

HE checked it. He'd spoken in that half-interested half-tolerant manner one frequently adopts toward a seven-year-old. But he faced something at least 77.

"That a good-looking girl like Hilda Sands would have the crowd with her, eh? Well, before I tell you why she hasn't, if I do, we'll see the finish of this match."

During the talk, the redhead had ached her first service. She changed courts.

The bright-haired Hilda Sands tossed up a ball. A blistering smash, good as gold, raising a white cloud-puff at Miss Graydon's service line. The ball crashed against the backstop, shivering the wire.

The old lady chuckled. "Know what that reminds me of? Helen Wills, one time years ago. The gallery was all against her. But she just gave that gallery the horse laugh and stuck 'em in the way that girl's doing. I like her."

"You were going to tell me why—er, about her." Bill hesitated slightly. He had no real curiosity about Hilda Sands. As guest of a know! I know, for instance, that you only came last night—that you're a Bill Jarvis—that you're engaged to the pretty dark-haired Coulter girl—that her father's your boss—and that you're here for a week of your vacation. Nice going, Bill. It's smart to marry the boss's daughter."

Bill gaped down into intricately coiffured white hair. But then, he thought, no miracles had been passed. The Coulters had simply told Mrs. Fasker about him.

"By the way," Mrs. Fasker inquired, "where is Beverly? Your fiancée, I mean."

"Oh, she doesn't like tennis. Said she'd have a nap while I watched the match."

"You're probably wondering why I tell myself go about the Sands girl?"

"A little," he admitted.

"Mrs. Fasker waited a second. Then: 'As I said, I'm a gossip nowadays. But I don't dish dirt, Bill Jarvis. Unless there's sufficient reason. You, however, look like a good guy. Fact is, yourself and myself and the Coulter family, I think, are about the only good guys in this plush-lined hostility. The rest are a pack of snobs. And, for my money, you could also spell that with an 'I.' Sides!"

"I don't get you, exactly," Bill said.

"You will. But you'd get something else from somebody else sooner or later. With a malicious twist on it, no doubt. So I'll tell you first. Because I'm sorry for Hilda Sands and I'd like you to be nice to her, if you have a chance."

"Well, sure. Why wouldn't I be?"

MRS. FASKER screwed her head around and looked up. "I think you would. But most of them aren't. You see, some kind—and unknown—soul has spread it around that Hilda's father is a jailbird."

Bill whistled. "Why would anyone want to hurt the girl?"

The old lady shrugged. "I don't actually know. But I suspect that Hilda Sands is just too attractive and—well, generally good to suit the rest of the women here. You may have noticed, Bill, that there's a preponderance of females at the hotel. Personable gentlemen, like yourself, are pretty scarce. You'll probably be torn limb from limb, though you are promised to Beverly Coulter."

Records Broken Sunday

During the past school year we have had over one hundred volunteer workers in the Scout organization. All leaders and co-leaders are volunteer workers, giving of their time each week to meet with their respective troops to see that the Scout program is carried out as it should be. The job of securing these volunteer leaders is very difficult and the need for leaders is a constant job on the part of the organization chairman. Anyone desiring to become a part of the Girl Scout Program in Sedalia will please contact Mrs. Cline Cain, organization chairman or the Scout office. We need all the leaders we can get and training will be offered to all those who feel the need of further training. We wish to extend our thanks to all those who have so faithfully been with the scouting program during the past school year, without you the program could not have been carried on successfully.

The regular Girl Scout Council meeting was held in the Scout office on Thursday morning. Nine members were present for the business meeting conducted by Mrs. R. Gouge.

Troop 27 of Smith Colton high school has been busy working on a Red Cross First Aid course under the supervision of Mrs. A. A. Studebaker. The requirements for the Red Cross certificate are more rigid than the requirements for the First Aid badge. The instructor must be licensed by the Area Office and the course of study must be followed as outlined by the National Red Cross.

Members of the troop who completed the course are Mary Louise Clifton, Sara Harned, Nancy Harned, Carolee Harned, Mildred McCandless, Barbara Black, Carolyn Heck, Donna Richardson, Nancy Vaughn, Joy Cunningham, Pat Korondo and Connie Overfelt.

Special training sessions will be held during the coming week for all leaders who are helping with the Day Camp at Camp Sakajawea on June 19-23rd. On Monday, June 12th, a class will be held in leathercraft and textile painting. The meeting will be at the First Methodist church at 1:30 p. m.

About 800 at 'I Do' Reunion

CLINTON, Ill., June 12—(AP)—A minister who has married 782 couples without exacting a single "love, honor and obey" held a reunion yesterday with couples who have said "I do" before him.

The Rev. H. B. Wheaton conducted a "wedding bells" service in his big, new First Christian church attended by about 800 persons, including about 250 of the couples he has married.

Of the 782 marriages Mr. Wheaton has performed in the last 22 years, only eight have ended in divorce.

"The key to married happiness is common sense," he said.

"Marriage is not a lark in a boat which may be reached when the seas get rough," he added. "It is rather a voyage fraught with storms and hardships which prove the loyalty of man and wife to each other."

He wrote his own version of the marriage vows which eliminates the "love, honor and obey" clause and substitutes this:

"Do you promise that you will cultivate that nobility of mind and heart which will hold her (his) loyal affection? Do you promise to share with her (him) in constant sympathy the joys and sorrows of daily life, and that by divine help you will keep this pledge as long as you both live?"

CHICAGO, June 12—(AP)—A crowd of about 120,000 persons broke all attendance records at the Lincoln park zoo yesterday to see Bushman, the famous but ailing gorilla.

The 500 pound Bushman, usually a pleasing performer, was too sick to pay much attention to the audience which filed past his cage.

But Dr. Lester Fisher, zoo veterinarian, says he is more encouraged by Bushman's condition—he breathes better and seems more comfortable. He became acutely ill Thursday, apparently faith and vision. Leadership which is unselfish and leadership which is willing to pay the price of leadership, and what a price that sometimes is."

Rotary Talk On Progress of Community

Zander closed his talk bringing out some sound logical philosophy on life. In brief, he said that if every individual would complement three people each day of our lives, it would adjust our whole mental thinking and the entire outlook of community development would be changed. By searching for the things in other people to compliment; but getting into that habit, we would commence to subconsciously and automatically emulate those things for which we look in other people. He stated that if everyone would practice this simple rule, that this would be the key which would unlock the lock to all the things about which he had been talking.

Development of the Rotary Club, development of Sedalia, development of the State of Missouri and the development of our Nation. That it was as simple as that—"each person should compliment three people a day."

Spraying or The Painting Of Stumps

Four Different Methods in Use Of Chemicals

Many questions arise pertaining to the control of brush by spraying or painting the stumps. This article is prepared by the County Extension Office based on the information as prepared by the Field Crops Department, University of Missouri, College of Agriculture.

Four different methods of using chemicals may be used. Which one to use depends upon a number of factors. The operator is in the best position to determine which one will best suit him.

Spraying the material on the leaves has shown promise of controlling most sprouts, but application over a two or three year period will likely be necessary to give a complete kill. The best time of application is comparatively short but has an important bearing on results secured. Present information indicates that the spraying is best done soon after the leaves are fully developed and before hot, dry weather causes a check in growth. Another favorable period for good results is in the fall just before the leaves start to lose their green color, and at the time plant food is being translocated to the root system.

In using the spray at these 2 times enough spray material should be used to get 2 to 3 pounds of acid equivalent per acre. For example if a gallon of the material has from 2 to 3 pounds of acid equivalent in it one gallon of such material should be mixed with enough water to spray on an acre. Too much water would mean a run off from the leaves and a loss of material. On the other hand enough water should be added to have enough material to wet the leaves. The amount of water to add will come with experience. If the acid equivalent for example is 1 1/4-lb. per gallon then about 2 gallons of water should be added to get enough liquid to spray the leaves.

Question What to Use

The next question is whether to use 2,4-D or 2,4,5-T or ammate. Since 2,4-D is the cheapest of the three one will want to use it where it is effective. On some brush 2,4-D is apparently more effective than 2,4,5-T. On others the 2,4,5-T is more effective and 2,4-D will not do the job.

So far 2,4-D has been found to be more effective on hickbrush, willow and sumac. On the other hand 2,4,5-T is more effective on Osage orange, and brambles. For information on other brush one should depend upon the manufacturer's recommendation or use a mixture of half 2,4-D and half 2,4,5-T and use 3 to 4 pounds acid equivalent per acre. This mixture is also recommended if included in the brush to be killed there are those plants that are more susceptible to each of these two.

Ammate, 3 to 4 pounds per gallon of water, may be used as a spray. Enough should be added to wet the foliage thoroughly. It is very effective on large brush, but may kill the grass. It is rather expensive.

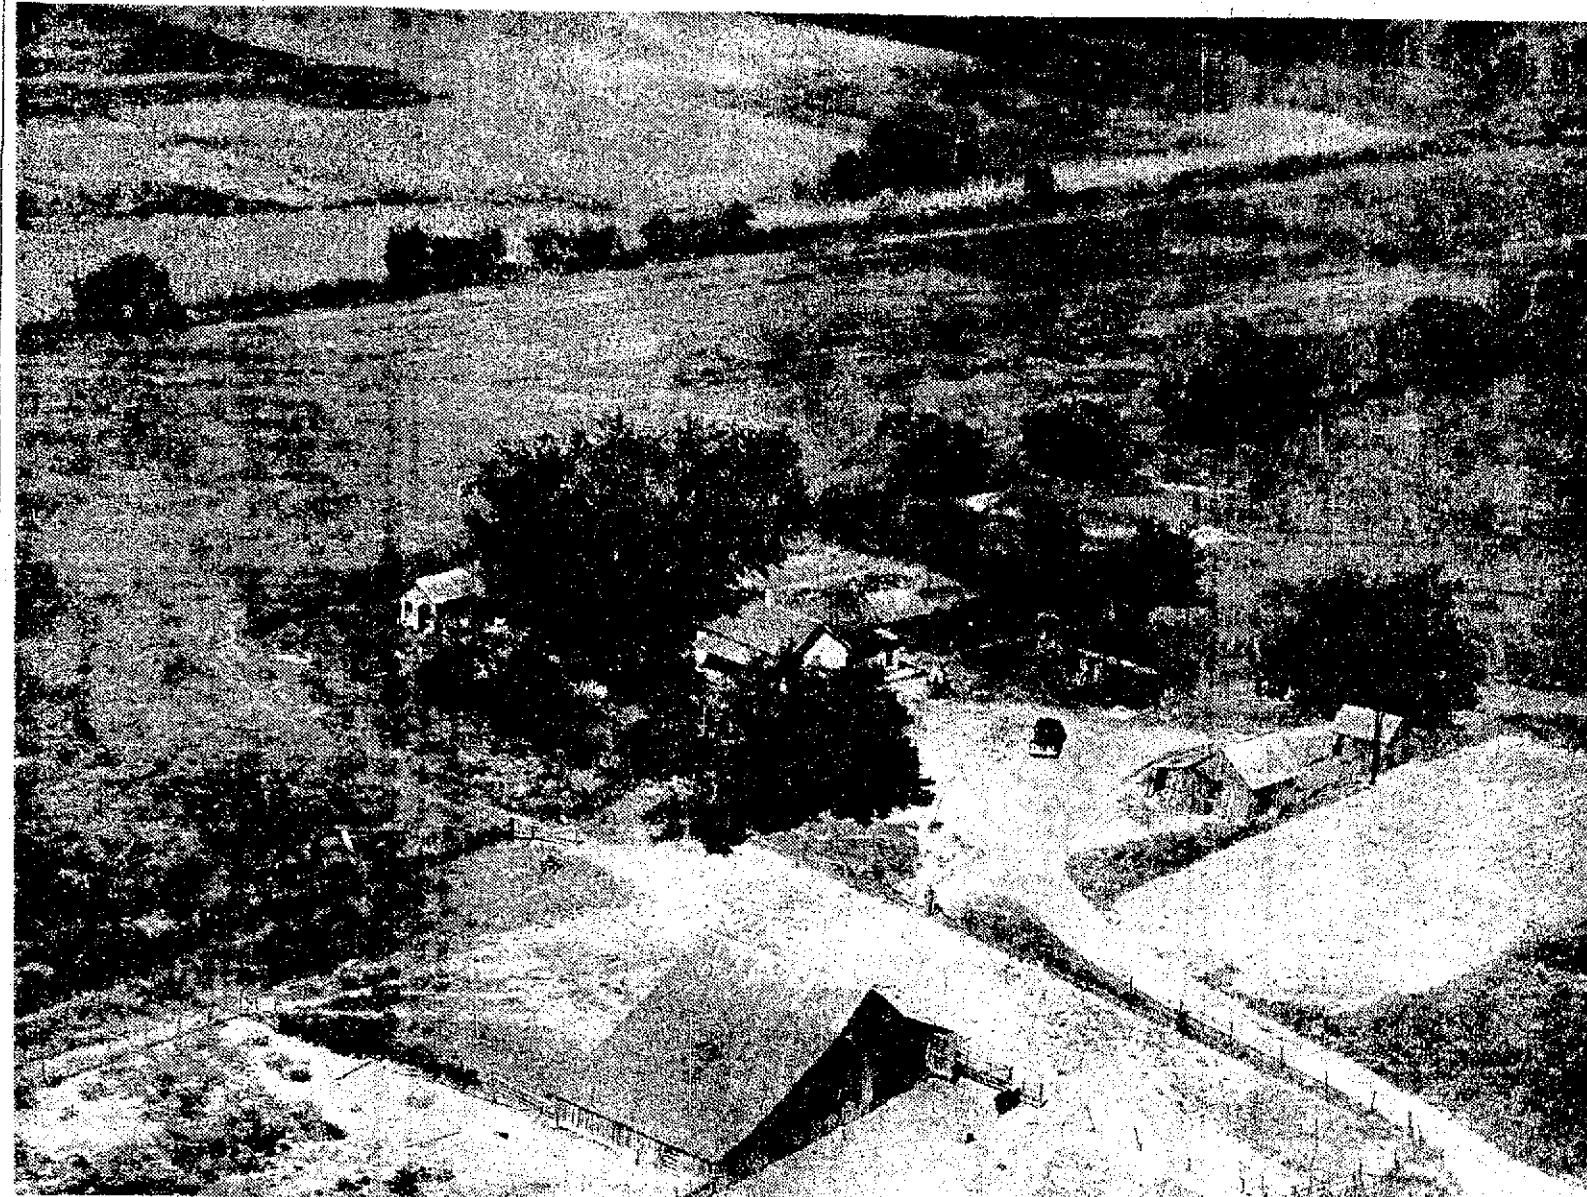

Frequently it is not convenient to spray during the growing season. Further, if pastures could be sprayed in the dormant period legumes might thus escape serious damage. Here is where the dormant spray has a place. In this case use either 2,4,5-T with 1/4 pint 40% material or equivalent per gallon kerosene or diesel fuel oil, or use 2,4,5-T and 2,4-D (50-50 mixture) in 1/4 pint 40% material or equivalent per gallon kerosene or diesel fuel oil. Use enough spray to give thorough coverage. Low pressure-low volume sprayer is most desirable.

Spraying at Base

Now since the dormant spray is not very practical for large brush, some other approach to dormant application for larger material seems desirable. The spraying of the base of standing brush from the ground up to around 12 inches has given very promising results. So far the spray has been applied completely around the base and only trees from 10-12 inches down have been treated. Indications are that this method can be applied at any time. The bark should be thoroughly wetted but run off isn't desirable. Use the same formula as outlined for the dormant spray. The material may be sprayed or painted on the desired area.

Many questions come up as how to treat stumps to prevent sprouting. Over three years results indicate that a high percentage (80 to 85%) of stumps properly treated immediately after cutting will not resprout. Since most areas need to be cleared before any fertilization or seeding can be done this seems to be a very practical and economical way to use chemicals. Application of the materials should be made within a

Mystery Farm Pictures in Central Missouri---

Whose farm is it?

Occupants of the above farm home may have wondered this spring about a plane buzzing low over their buildings. The picture explains it. The airplane pilot didn't know whose farm it was. The photographer didn't either.

The two of them just flew around the Central Missouri area served by the Sedalia Democrat-Capital newspapers and took pictures. They couldn't take pictures of all the farms but they got as many good shots as possible during the light time.

Prefabricated Soil Saving On The Dr. Walter Farm

Steps in the installation of the above structure are pictured below. The pipe, made of culvert material, can be welded together in a shop and hauled to the job as it was here or it can be welded at the site. The material for such a structure costs slightly more than a concrete one but almost all few hours after cutting off the trees.

The materials used for this are:

(1) 2,4,5-T, 1/2 pint 40% material in 1 gallon of kerosene or diesel fuel oil.

(2) An equal mixture of 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T using 1/2 to 3/4 pint of a 40% mixture with 1 gallon of kerosene or diesel fuel oil.

(3) Four pounds of ammate to one gallon of water. Use during growing season as it may not be effective in cold weather.

Spray or paint one of these on stumps—preferable 10 to 12 inches in diameter or smaller—cut as close to the ground as possible. Use material soon.

Ammate and 2,4,5-T have given equally good results during the growing season but 2,4,5-T has given more consistent results when used during the dormant season.

The 2,4-D-2,4,5-T mixture does not seem to be quite as effective as the straight 2,4,5-T but can be used where straight 2,4,5-T is unavailable. The concentration should go up to compensate for the lower content of 2,4,5-T.

Only Ester types of 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T are recommended in brush control work.

of the work of installation can be done with a bulldozer which cuts total cost considerably. Dr. Walter is a member of the Pettis County Balanced Farming Association and members of the county agent staff assisted in planning the terrace outlets (grass waterways) and the structure.

New type of structure put in recently on Dr. Walter farm. It's purpose is to avoid cutback in terrace outlets. The stem of the pipe is 30 feet long and 15 inches in diameter while the bowl is 4 1/2 feet high and 24 inches across.

Sketch of the installation. The purpose of the fill is to hold the water up until it can go through the pipe. Deepening the water in the reservoir also hurries the emergency spillway is provided to assist with real heavy rains.

Thirteen 4-H's To Club Week

Thirteen Pettis County 4-H's left for Columbia today to attend the annual State 4-H Club Week at the University of Missouri, College of Agriculture from June 12 to 15. Approximately 892 4-H's from all over the state or 2 1/2 percent of the total Missouri 4-H enrollment is expected to be in attendance.

The program will get underway tonight with a picnic and campfire circle. One new feature this year is a visit by the entire delegation to the State Capitol at Jefferson City. The major portion of Club Week activities will be similar to those of previous years. It will include outstanding speakers, discussions and tours of the University Campus and farms, dress reviews, coffee hour for leaders, athletic events, talent night and the friendship party on the last night.

The 4-H's attending from Pettis county are Charles Long of the Van Natta 4-H club, Marion Edmundson, Flat Creek; Howard Brown, South Abell; Bobby Baxter, Smithton; Forrest Eugene Reid; Prairie Ridge; Leonard Ives, Pacific; Betty Leiter, Striped College; Anna Lee Harvey, Walnut Grove; Carol Houk, High Point; Joyce Walk, Brown; Phyllis Schlusing, Ringen Brushy; and Emmett Fairfax of the South Abell 4-H club who is president of the State 4-H Council.

put in the structure is in the left foreground "floating" concrete to make a seep collar. The forms for a second seep collar can be seen just back of him.

A rain came soon after the fill was made around the pipe. This picture taken the morning following installation shows Bryan Phifer, assistant county agent, checking the operation of the structure.

Allocation on Saving of Soil

Jas. A. Harvey, chairman of the Pettis County PMA committee, reports that farmers are greatly interested in the five special practices approved under the 1950 Agricultural Conservation Program in this county.

At the beginning of the 1950 program year, the county and community committeemen designated $39,400 out of the total ACP allocation of $139,400 for Pettis county to be used in assisting farm owners and operators to carry out long-range soil conservation practices on their farms this year. These five practices on which the $139,400 is to be used include standard terraces, diversion terraces, sod waterways, farm ponds for livestock water, and establishment of permanent pasture acreages.

To date the county committee has received 175 requests from co-operating farmers for this assistance on one or more of the five practices which are needed on their farms and which, with the assistance being offered, can now be performed. These requests amount to a total of $22,435 however in every instance it is not possible for the county committee to approve the full amount of the request. Ninety requests have been approved for a total assistance of $11,175 and the projects on which assistance has been approved have been completed on 37 farms. The majority of these completed projects are farm ponds and standard terraces.

Numerous applications for Special assistance have been received on pasture improvement however these projects will not be performed until September and early October, the best and recommended season of the year for the seeding of the grasses and legumes. A few instances are known where the farmer has already applied limestone at the rate of 3 tons per acre to the field which is to be seeded to pasture this fall and the material is being worked into the soil this summer in preparation for the newly seeded pasture.

Farmers who are interested in securing assistance to enable them to perform one or more of the special practices are invited to call at the county PMA office to discuss the specifications with a member of the county committee and file an application even though the work may not be performed until some time this fall.

The Better Half?

CHICAGO—(AP)—"Wash your car, mister?" a seedy chap asked Carl Bergstrom, secretary to the captain at the Grand Crossing police station. "Do a good job and I'll give you fifty cents," Bergstrom said.

An hour later the hobo came into the station, pointed out the window at the sleek and shiny automobile and collected his money. But when Bergstrom went out to the car to drive home, he found it had been washed on only one side.

READY, AIM, —
BY MERRILL BLOSSER

DO YOU HAVE TO BRING THAT LOUD-MOUTHED PARROT?

RUMBLE SAYS HE WANTS TO SLEEP OUTSIDE WITH US! HE'S HOT, TOO!

HOT RUMBLE—HOT RUMBLE! RRRK!

PUSH, FECK. I AM! YOU PULL!

SHHH! THEY'RE IN BED! THINK WE CAN HIT THEM?

IT'S PRETTY LONG RANGE! BUT WE CAN TRY!
